Voyage of Determination

In September of 1947 the ship of "Knowledge" was launched in the "Harbor of McAdory" and started out on a long hard voyage which is known to all as "The Voyage of Determination". The ship was sailing under the capable leadership of Adm. H. H. King. Her capable assistants were Lt. Hodge, Lt. Worthington, and Lt. Pearson. At our rating of Seamen 3rd Class (sophomore) we sailed through the first nine months of the voyage dodging continuously the ice bergs and the reefs in our path with such success that we were all promoted to the rate of Seamen 2nd Class and received 3 months shore leave. As usual, some liked the freedom too much and just deserted the ship at our return to deck.

We lost many at the port but we also picked up others who were headed for the same destination as we. Along with our promotion we received new leaders—Lt. J. G. Boyd, and Lt. J. G. Buck. After the order of Ship Ahoy was given we were off to a bright new start. Even though we were sailing smoothly for a while, there were rocks we couldn't miss and that caused much work and will power to dodge and again get on our way. During this nine months we stopped at many ports, one of the largest being "The Port of Money Making". Here we spent a great deal of our time. Another important stop was "The Port of Honors". We received many of the honors offered, ranging from beauties and talent, to scholarship and citizenship. At long last it was promotion time and the big time of our voyage. After bidding the Seamen 1st Class goodbye in many ways; one being the prom, we were promoted to take their place. We docked at the harbor, the last before we reached our destination.

As any crew, many more had become sea sick and failed to return after shore leave. We received new leaders again and also new crew members. They were Lt. Commandr Briggs and Lt. Commander Pass. As we pulled anchor and were on our way once again, we had little conflicts of politics but all survived; the most surviving of all being Kenneth Sanders when he realized his job of leading and directing the crew through the last nine months of the voyage. One of the first things of importance was the ordering of our brass (class rings). As we were nearing our harbor, many epidemics hit our crew; one of which was very contagious commonly known as love sickness, but most survived. We got off our course a little and hit two of the ports we had formerly visited; "The Harbor of Money Making" and "The Harbor of Honors". This time we stayed longer in each port and really learned their value toward our future voyages.

At long last we have reached our "Harbor of Diplomacy" with a sigh of relief from all crew members who have survived. Here we part after our final degree of promotion, each choosing his own voyage from now on. Whether it be the voyage of "Home Making" or the voyage of "Profession"; we have a strong belief that each will succeed and anchor his ship in the "Harbor of Success" some day. Each leaves the ship with high hopes and dreams worth a million, but also with memories never to be forgotten.

Memories

Dear McAdory, time has passed and now we are through
Although it seems that we have just begun.
We must leave your dear halls and fond memories too,
For our works here have been done.
May we have served thee well these short years,
And in your memories may we always be.
Even as our eyes are dimmed by tears,
Happier moments we shall never again see.
As we begin our journey down the road of life,
We shall always remember you,
And as we struggle through our strife,
To you, dear McAdory, we shall be true!
Now our time has come and we must go - -
But to your faculty we would say
That deep in our hearts we know
We appreciate your help along the way.
